

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFATORY REMARKS.

This Catalogue embraces the titles of three hundred and sixty one anti-Methodistical Works; eighty by Methodist Authors; eighty-five miscellaneous; and twenty-one political.

But those who have made special bibliography their study, are aware of the difficulty, if not impossibility, of making a list in any one department perfect.

There will be found a number, but by no means, a full, much less a complete list, of works on ecclesiastical reform by Methodist writers.

There are also the titles of several political pamphlets, occasioned by the publication of Mr. Wesley's "Calm Address to our American Colonies," which provoked from the celebrated Junius this memorable rebuke: "You have forgotten the precept of your Master, that God and Mammon cannot be served together; you have one eye upon a pension, and the other up to heaven; one hand stretched out to the king, the other raised up to God. I pray that the first may reward you, and the last forgive you."

No attempt has been made—six instances only excepted, to indicate the numerous anti-Methodistical essays, occurring in British and American periodical literature.

Where these marks (|| † *) are prefixed, copies of said works may be found as indicated, in the following libraries, and to these, other publications (of like character) as met with, will be added:

* General Theological Seminary of the Protestant Episcopal Church, New York.

|| Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church, at Princeton, New Jersey.

† Library Company of Philadelphia.

† Library of St. Timothy's Hall, (Protestant Episcopal,) Baltimore County, Md.

||†*_____, The Enthusiasm of the Methodists and Papists considered. By Bishop Lavington, with notes, introduction, and appendix; by the Rev. Richard Polwhele. London, 1820; 8vo., pp. cccxii and 493.

Says an able critic, in speaking of this rare and truly excellent work:—

"This eminent writer (Bishop Lavington,) has here unfolded the tendencies of a system, which at its origin, made use of chicanery, sophistry, prevarication, conceitedness and effrontry, to secure a position in the Ecclesiastical world, and which has maintained that position, by pretensions to extraordinary revelations usurping inspiration,—its ranters, comparing themselves with prophets and apostles, so that the phrenzies of a disturbed brain, or of a deluded imagination, are considered the marks and tests of saintship; its leaders possessing a spirit of envy and rancor towards each other, and a spirit of bitterness and uncharitableness towards the rest of christendom, so that one easily perceives the difference between such an experience, and the true devotion of sincere piety, the unaffected love of God in the heart, and a proper zeal for the truths of his word, the only well-grounded hope of Heaven,—what is the chaff to the wheat saith the Lord. We could wish that every reader could be induced to peruse this faithful portraiture of the early workings of Methodism."

Mr. Wesley, it appears, undertook to 'pour the leperous distilment' into the ear of this virtuous lady, to the effect that 'her husband had no right to regulate her behaviour as to conversing with him.' However, as soon as Mr. Wesley heard that these indictments had been found against him, he did not tarry to discuss the question further, but skulked out of the town in the night, fled to Charles-Town and thence to England." Mr. Wesley's calmness is only to be found in his title pages; he is far from being a dispassionate writer; and the Americans have great reason to complain of him as a fomenter rather than a composer of national discord.—Monthly Review.

Together with Thoughts on Toleration, and on the point how far the conscience of the subject is concerned in a War; remarks on Constitutions in general, and that of England in particular; on the nature of Colonial Government, and a recommendation of a Plan of Peace. FINISHING STROKE to Mr. Wesley's Calm Address. (By the Rev. James Murray.) Newcastle upon Tyne, 1778; 12mo.

Perhaps no two pamphlets did more good to the American cause than Dr. Johnson's Taxation no Tyranny, and Mr. Wesley's Calm Address, both intended to have quite a contrary effect from that which was produced by them. This arose from the numerous and able answers which were immediately circulated by lovers of truth, and enemies to oppression, in which the specious arguments of the ministerial hirelings were at once confuted and shown in their true light.—Rich. Bib. Am. Nov.

Mr. Wesley did not confine himself to religious discussion. In the beginning of the war in America, his character imbibed a strong tincture of politics: and two sermons* he preached at this juncture, in the Foundry, and West Street Chapel, from the views they contained of the conduct of the Government, and the anti-ministerial spirit which they breathed, were very remarkable. A gentleman happening to ask what he then thought of the public measures, was answered, "What should I think? Oppression will make a wise man mad." This is sufficient to show that at that period, he was decidedly averse to the war. Presently after, he changed his sentiments. His conversion was instantaneous; and what is most remarkable, in the history of this event, is, that sudden as it was, it was absolute and complete. Converted himself, his next care was to convert his brethren; and in this office, his zeal was indefatigable. He not only carried his sentiments into all companies, and made them the subject of almost every conversation, but he eagerly displayed them in public; and the pulpit finished what the table began.†

When Mr. Wesley changed his politics, and published his "Calm Address to the American Colonies," many copies were shipped for New York; a gentleman of that country, alarmed for the safety of a people with whom he was connected, and trembling for the probable consequences, should a pamphlet of such a tendency pass into general circulation, laid violent hands upon it, and destroyed or returned the whole impression; so that till a considerable time after this transaction, scarcely any one had heard that such a piece had been published. This incident was the salvation of Methodism in America.‡
